The Free Press says that, "Not a word has been heard about that terrible Bisiromore townsite scandal for at least a month!"

Quite so. It has been bottled for future use and will be uncorked at the right moment. Pray do not forget that. If you, dear Free Press, knew the kind of this western country as well as we do, you would be seized of the fact that any lawsuit tried at Macleod, involving the interests of a local Grit, is the veriest kind of a farce.

No one in Southern Alberta takes that Bisiromore townsite verdict seriously, except, of course, the wild Macdonnie, who now comes into legal possession of the property. The decision of the Macleod jury was a foregone conclusion, the trial itself, under the circumstances, being an utterly useless formality. The submitting of evidence to this jury was a pure waste of time.

The simple fact of Paddy Nolan being retained for the Mackenzie interests was a giveaway. Every man in these parts who gets found out and is conscious of being in the wrong, instinctively turns for aid to P. J. Nolan; and this keen-witted lawyer immediately proceeds to prove the entire innocence of his client, getting unfavorable witnesses all bailed up so that they don't know their own names, packing on the jury box as if it were a jew's harp and finally pooh-poohing the prosecution into a condition of manifest imbecility. The verdict subsequently occurred to us that it would be fatal for the sake of the country at large if P. J. was not so diabolically expert at his business.

During the past week or two we have all been treated to a hot line of patriotic orations.

"This Canada of ours, that glorious heritage handed down to us as a sacred trust by our forefathers and our forefathers' fathers who fought and bled and died and rump-y-umtum-tiddle-um." (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

"I, men of Alberta, also love that flag—that good old flag, the Union Jack." (Uproarious cheers as applause braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze, appeal to your loyalty, sir, to patriotism, to patriotism, which, I might say, reaches its noblest height, its loftiest climax, at smoking concerts and occasions such as the present.) "Rise be the man who says me nay." (Tremendous cheering.) Why, ladies and gentlemen, I would be recreant to my trust if I did not emphatically boo-boo-umpty-tiddle, etc., etc. (A voice, "Stay with it!") But I have spoken longer than I intended-ever-it'ries of the on! On on!) What is it that is around on this vast and intelligent audience (frantic applause), when I gaze upon the schoolchildren gathered here today, the future mothers and the future real estate agents of this fair city, I am reminded of the story of Mrs. Casey's euchre party. A couple of Irish ladies were present, and one said to the other, "Miss are you going to Mrs. Casey's euchre party?" "Mike somewhat politely replied, "I am." To which the other replied, "I am." (Roars of laughter, during which the speaker remained himself.)

"Men of Alberta, sons of another, who are we here today? What has brought us together on this fair land? Tell me that! Tell me that! Why are so many of the Prime Ministers of this great and glo-rious of agriculture—I ask you men of Alberta why are you here today? (Oh, dry up!) Well, fellow citizens—I might address my ladies and gentlemen for I know the intelligence of the day we have graced by our presence—I repeat my question, what is it? What is it? I ask you who are here, and why are you here? Is it for the sake of—(loud and prolonged cheering)—of—I will hear each one answer for himself. (Voices, the brief response of the valiant sons and daughters of the north, commencing with a Hoarse and ending with a Voice.) "Now, what say others? What say others? Shall we, shall we, shall we,

The same is true all over the west. Calgary, Edmonton, Medicine Hat, Regina, Saskatoon and Prince Albert. The banks get all the deposits they can, but are unwilling to let loose of a cent because of the money stringency in the speculative circles of the east. That's where our Canadian banking system is weak—all the banks have their headquarters in Toronto or Montreal and they are sensitive to the slightest flurry in Wall street, Montreal or London. The system is sounder than that of the states, but the small independent national banks all over western states have no connection beyond their own small territory. The stock is owned by men in the small towns who know the local conditions and know that a flurry in Wall street should really have no bearing in the far west. Here today in western Canada, conditions are really sound at the heart of things and could not be better, barring a lot of reckless real estate dealers, but in spite of that our western towns are being held up because a lot of dubs have got into the market three thousand miles away and scared the bank managers down east. They at once wire out west and the muzzle is clapped on every bank vault in Alberta. That's the way it works in practice.

The bottom, of course, has dropped out of the Winnipeg building boom and a fine thing it is, too, that the real estate boomers are forced to go to work. This really does not affect the prosperity of the country, in fact the obstruction has no direct relation to the substantial prosperity of the country. They contribute nothing to the products of value. Therefore the whine they are now putting up ought to deceive no one and influence but slightly the movement of funds. However, it does, thanks to these confounded bank managers in the east. Recently a Toronto Bank manager who had been speculating for years in the bank's funds went to pieces and landed in the penitentiary. All these years the other bank managers knew what he was doing. It was common property in banking circles that he was a crook and yet the people never seemed to suspect him. This amazing mystery that surrounds a bank manager always did astonish us. They do business on the capital of their depositors and yet when these same depositors want to overdraw their accounts there is a hullabaloo.

We wish to notify our numerous readers in Winnipeg that the Canadian Football Team, of Calgary, are on their way to the East standing side by side, so that the twenty-third is necessarily placed in an unfortunate position. As for Calgary, we give it up.

Then there is our familiar friend "graft." But it is only as a slang expression that "graft" is new. Graft is old as the hills and crops up with alarming frequency in the bible. There was any amount of graft in Abraham's time. The people of those days were but human, and to graft is to be human: to escape being caught, sublime. There was always graft, always, always, and there always will be as long as the world lasts.

Father Abraham was one of the worst old grafters in history. He was a "sooner" and introduced Sarah as his wife, or sister, as expediency and the king's fancy seemed to demand. She was both. Abraham in our day would have been condemned, as would many of the other grafting patriarchs. Abe was a grafter all right.

The gams and the crooks went from Edmonton to the Battleford races this year, being careful to sidestep Calgary. By this time, no doubt, the citizens of Battleford are calling to mind the motto of the celebrated old Greek philosopher, Barnumicus, "Pro bunko publico."

"Are you the editor that takes in society news?" inquired the caller, an undernized man with a tired and timid appealing look on his face.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man at the desk. "I can take in any kind of news. What have you?"

"Why, it's this way," said the caller, lowering his voice. "My wife gave a small party last night, and I am willing to pay to have the report of the affair put in the paper."

"We don't charge anything for publishing society news," observed the young man at the desk, taking the proffered manuscript and looking it over.

"That's all right," was the reply. "You don't understand. I wrote this up myself, and put in a line or two that says, 'Mr. Fewclothes assisted his distinguished wife in receiving the guests.' That's the way I want it to go in and I don't care if it costs a dollar or more. I want my friends to know, by George! that I still belong to the family."

How many, many people have tried chicken-ranching in this country and failed! There seems to be a hoodoo about raising chickens as a business. It certainly looks all right on paper. All you have to do is to take a pencil and a piece of paper and do a little multiplying. In a few minutes wealth looms in sight and even have millions in the bank and billions of chickens jumping about the premises. Better still, there is the further prospect of not having much work to do. There is no need to pitch hay to a squab and it is absurd to try and milk a broiler. A pretty home ranch, with lots of books (on poultry) and magazines and Pink Tins and Winning Posts and house and tobacco—and then prosperity and a trip home to the old country. A little Dry Gin this time, Fred.

To the day of his death the green, inexperienced poultry culturist never understands why the seven plagues of chickendom all fall upon him simultaneously. The stories that he read of the woman who paid off the mortgage, educated four children and toured Europe, from the profits of two pigeons and a "setting" of eggs, gave him no warning of his woes. To him alone comes the squabbles pigeon and the eggless hen. The simple life plus poultry is a delusion and a costly snare.

The farewell performance of the Fifteenth Light Horse Band was a revelation. There is just the twinkle of a star between their music and the music of some of the crack military bands across the water, and there can be little doubt that they will make a big hit at the Dublin exhibition and wherever else they may go. This is certainly the most delightful and winning method of advertising western Canada that could have been devised and is creditable to all concerned.

The armies have now disbanded and the military camp down by the Bow is no more. As a gathering of the clans it was a success, but it seems to be generally conceded that a couple of weeks is too brief a space of time for accomplishing all the instructive purposes of a camp. The first day or two there is "nothing doing," and what with Sundays and holidays the total working days do not reach over seven or eight. The talk about the mutiny over the grub was all nonsense, of course, but that lively dissatisfaction was expressed in some quarters over the commissariat is an indubitable fact. The most serious kick was over the hay provided some of the squadrons. It was mouldy and rotten, and the horses would not look at it. Incidentally, these grounds where the camp was held are far too small for the number of men and horses assembled.

The officers and men created a splendid impression as Dominion day. A more serviceable-looking bunch of horses, 6,400 good, the man authority puts the total war strength of the French army at 4,640,760 officers and men, 213,312 horses and 4,256 guns. It will be noticed that Germany is credited with 70,000 more men than France, and has almost 1,000 guns more. In the peace establishment, however, France has a slight lead, having at all times under arms 612,117 men, as against 584,088 men on the German forces. Both armies have enormous reserves, and each can quickly have under arms 2,000,000 trained men.

In July, when Germany was almost on the verge of giving the order to mobilize, the French entertained King Alfonso of Spain with an exhibition of the work of a battery of the new quick firing guns. In less than a minute a battery of four guns, firing at a distance of about four miles, literally riddled some earthworks 400 feet broad and 400 feet deep. It appeared to be evident that a regiment might have been annihilated in the same time. The following day there was a decided change in the tone of the German newspapers.

But how would a western Canadian militia soldier like to join the German army and enjoy the treatment then accorded privates by their officers? The following is the experience of a German army private:

"During the second manoeuvers," he says, "I was sent on ahead to select quarters for the company. The police supply the names of householders who are expected to shelter the soldiers, and I had to decide on the number of men who should be assigned to each place. It seems that our major dispatched a courier with a message for our captain. For some reason or other the message was not delivered. The next day the captain called me and in the presence of the whole company rebuked me for not delivering the message.

"I did not receive any message," I ventured.

"Shut your mouth you liar," he thunders. And again he bellowed: 'Why didn't you deliver that message, you——?'

"I told him a second time that I had not received any message. The captain's temper broke all bounds. With an oath he rode his horse at me full tilt, hurling filthy names at me the while. When he had ridden right up to me—I fully expected he would run me over, but I dared not move—he suddenly reined in his horse, and, drawing a long dagger from his belt, shouted, Held with passion: 'I have half a mind to stick this through your vile body, you schweinhund!'

"Once more he asked me about the message, and once more I answered him.

"Then five days' confinement and bread and water be your punishment, you liar!' he retorted.

"He repeated the question several times and increased my term of imprisonment each time I answered in the negative until my term of imprisonment equaled fourteen days. I was placed under arrest. Next day I was released. I afterwards found that the captain had discovered his mistake, but he never referred to it."

Another idol shattered. It turns out that the cuckoo is the earliest riser of the bird, and the greenfinch next. The lark is the latest. Next thing we hear will be that the lark can't get up without a Collins.

We hate to be always showing people up, but some one has to do it.

There is a real estate man in this city—drop around and we'll give you his name, if you want it—who succeeded in putting his hired girl (English) on Queer street. This was bad enough, in all conscience; but, what is worse, he was not man enough to look after her when the inevitable consequences loomed in sight. The poor girl, who is now near her confinement, hired a little cottage on Stanley avenue and, in spite of appeals to her betrayer, passed three days without anything to eat. Some one happened to learn of her condition and went to the real estate man and told him. At first he denied all connection with the affair, but on being told of certain letters written by him, in the possession of the girl, he finally acknowledged the corn. The unfortunate young woman is now in Mr. Woods' Rescue Home.

It seems strange that the Eye Opener should be the only paper in Calgary to mention these things. Other papers report drunks, hoist faithfully, and thefts and assaults, but they sidestep the gravest crime of all, the ruining of innocent girls. Ministers, also, are chary about tackling this sort of thing. We are not publishing the name of the guilty party in this instance though we will promptly tell anyone who happens to ask us—but we give warning that the next case of this nature that comes to our notice won't be handled so gently. The only thing that keeps us in check now is the fact that the party is a married man and there is no use worrying about further distress.

The Eye Opener does not wish to assume a Pecksniffian role, but we ask any right-minded man in Calgary if it is fair to put a girl on the bum and then refuse her support in the way of grub and funds during her period of trouble. As for the general immorality of the thing, we don't care a snap of the finger about that. It is none of our business.

The military camp, 600 officers and men, was commanded by Billy Grisbach and his bulldog, Togo, ably assisted by Colonel Steele and Colonel Walker. General Griesbach was driven round the city in an automobile and was good enough to say that we had quite a burg.

We have, we have; even though we are shy a Letopha.

Dr. Brett's charming summer place at the foot of Sulphur Mountain, Banff, where the hot springs have their source, is more popular with visitors than ever. The Grand View Villa has been vastly improved by the new additions that have lately been put on. This is an ideal retreat for people who desire a quiet rest and a course of sulphur baths. The hoop-harrah of the ordinary hotel is conspicuous by its absence at the Grand View, the hours being put in after a very homelike fashion, and it is just the place for tired humanity to get back into championship form.

The editor of the Midnapore Gazette, of whom we have not heard for some time, is back at the old stand and as perky as ever. He denies that he broke jail. The story, he says, was manufactured out of whole cloth. As a matter of fact he got six weeks knocked off for good conduct and his papers to prove it. Mr. McGonigle states in his newspaper that he is out for the stuff from now on and went accept subscriptions to the Gazette in drinks and cigars any more. His new motto is "In Rhino Veritas." We extend congratulations to our contemporary on his release and predict for him a bright future.

Yesterday was Orangeman's Day, held in honor of the memory of William Third of England, Prince of Orange. The Orange order is, of course, a protestant organization, but there is no intolerant spirit about it. Indeed, the constitution of the order specifically states that it is the duty of members to aid and defend all loyal subjects of every religious persuasion in the enjoyment of their constitutional rights.

In Canada, the main object of the order,—at the present moment, at least, —is to prevent the Catholics as a sect from hitting in and securing more than their proper share of political control. This certainly keeps the Orangemen bumping.

There is every reason to believe that Oliver's Land Bill was the victim of an organized lobby composed of C. P. R. and C. N. R. land-hounds. To say nothing of the group of wise guys interested in certain of those big land syndicates.

So bent are these rapacious corporations and syndicates on selling their own lands at $10, $12 and $15 per acre, that Oliver's practical and beneficent scheme to fill up the west and help the settler by turning loose government land at $3 an acre, fairly gave them the shivers.

These cold-blooded harpies, however, have only succeeded in delaying the passage of this bill for a year. Still, by just so much and for just so long will the in-flow of new settlers be prejudicially affected. Greenway's speech against the bill bore all the earmarks of a "stall," but it served its purpose.

Ha! What's that? J. P. Comma and wife, of Chatham, Ont., celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage last week. A pretty long sentence for two Commas. What?

It is rumored that the British cabinet at its last meeting decided that the scheme for an All-Red route is impracticable, on account of the heavy loss it would entail if carried out.

Australia has already turned it down as she confesses that a grant towards the scheme of $2,000,000 per annum is a little too much for her resources.

Now, what in thunder will Clifford do if they all turn it down? Possibly follow Dominion in the All-Blue route to the woods.

We always wondered where Joseph Rogram, M. P., hit upon the ingredients which give such a delightful taste and aroma to his unrivalled whiskey. A walkthrough antiquary writes that "the Romans used to serve at their banquets wines eighty and a hundred years old. They would mix with these wines turpentine, resin and sea water."

The Romans were apparently not on to the creosote and fish hook blend.

Alderman Stuart's silence in the council awakens some vague curiosity as to how it will apply the vocal energy he is now storing.

What has become of the Gentle Shepherd, R. L. Borden? His flock is straying and the places where the wool is short have become painfully obvious to the casual observer.

The C. P. R. have notified the city council that they cannot commence the construction of the subways before 1906, on account of lack of material. Oh well, if they don't keep us waiting longer than that it will be all right. It is somewhat difficult, at this moment, to conjecture precisely what "train excuse will be devised later on by R. B. Bennett to extend the delay into 1909, thence on to 1910 and so on ad infinitum, but no doubt it will be a good one.

Between some of these fake American magazine writers and this combination of easy-money men known as the Western Canadian Immigration Association, Western Canada is being advertised as a kind of Darkest Africa, where savages are found in great numbers, head hunters and skull worshippers abound and where any kind of adventure among the half civilized white people may be had on slight notice.

The ignorance of some of these "writers" on the Vanderveld-Knappen syndicate sends into Alberta from Chicago about Canadian institutions is enough to make a fat Indian laugh himself to death.

As an example—in the August number of the Review of Reviews, an American standard publication, appears an article on Canada, written by one P. T. McGrath and illustrated with pictures of the public men of this country. One of the most prominent figures is labelled. "Hon Sir Frederick Borden, minister of militia and defence and leader of the opposition in parliament."

Now, what do you think of that!

This man McGrath "did" Canada last year under the auspices of the Western Canadian Immigration Association. The poor devil apparently thought there was nothing odd about a cabinet minister being leader of the opposition.

But these are the kind of dubs upon whom the Western Canadian Immigration Association squanders the good hard money of Canadians and this is the kind of trash they dish up.

The game, for all we know, may be worked this way. One of these chaps means "Van"—the insiders all call him "Van"—and tells him he needs to have a vacation, "just a little outing for a month, anywhere, any old place." Van is ready at a proposition. The newspaper man gets his expense money, railroad fare and eight or ten dollars a day for meals, champagne, etc., and starts for western Canada—perhaps.

In other words, Van just hands around Chicago, have a quiet drunk and "turn in" one of those characteristic Western Canada immigration "stories."

Any old fool in the writing business can get hold of a pamphlet or two of immigration literature and build thereon a series of eight or ten very readable "stories" about the west.

Take the case of William F. Curtis, the great staff correspondent for the Chicago Record-Herald. This genius man has been through this country a couple of years ago, under the aegis of the Western Can. etc., ostensibly to write up the west. Curtis is a high-flyer and travels with a stenographer —who, by a mere accident, turns out to remember the story he wrote of Calgary—"Calgary, away out on the edge of things, where the population of 4,000 people live in tents and most of them are Americans who dominate the politics."

This is actually what he wrote and what the Chicago Record-Herald printed. The money for this damaging report was supplied by Canadians! Oh, you suckers!

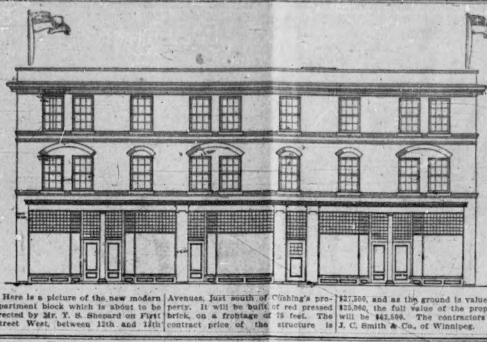
Of course, when it developed later that Curtis had been allotted through Calgary in a palace car and did not even stop off to see the town or city he wrote was understood. C. W. Rowley was president of the Alberta branch of this fake organization, and our old friend, Colonel G. C. Porter, was secretary. They were glad to disavow responsibility for the whole thing as soon as they got wind of the affair.

The Chicago-St. Paul gang must have enjoyed many a hearty laugh over the successful manner in which they were working the easy-going Canucks.



Here is a picture of the new modern apartment block which is about to be erected by Mr. T. S. Sheppard on First Street West, between 12th and 13th Avenues, just south of Clubhing's property. It will be built of red pressed brick, on a frontage of 75 feet. The contract price of the structure is $27,300, and as the ground is valued at $25,000, the full value of the property will be $42,300. The contractors are J. C. Smith & Co., of Winnipeg.

How silly, then, would it have been for Alberta and Saskatchewan to appropriate $2,500 each year to devote to this sort of advertising. Western Canada has been done irreparable harm by those vultures, men who are willing to write anything about the country in order to fulfill the condition that will give them a luxurious outing at the expense of the people whose resources they are crippling by their mendacious statements.

By the way, that "Last Great West," the alleged magazine which Vanderveld was promoting with our elegant money and such a hurrah and crash of trumpets has fallen flat. We foresaw this when the first number came out. No one ever sees or hears of the thing, except, of course, the real estate agents in the States who get the copies free of expense to be distributed among a certain class in western Iowa where Lynch has his big real estate offices.

Vanderhoof is spending several thousand dollars a month, however, from his elaborate offices in Chicago on this same scheme; and, what with runnings around all over the country at Canada's expense and the chappies he is giving vacations at the expense of dumbhide Canadians, he manages to spend every dollar the deluded C. P. R. and foolish government officials subscribe.

The press of this city has excellent reasons for being down on the counter-Canadian Immigration Association. The quill pushers have every right to feel sore. It may not be out of place in these columns to compliment Manager Curtis of the Lyric, for having had the nerve and enterprise to bring Mrs. Phike out to these prairie wilds at a guarantee of $1,000 a performance. Calgarians turned out to witness the performance of this incomparable actress only fairly well, and what with good times here and bad times there, Mr. Willie just broke even. As in a poker game, as it is in the theatrical game. With the public dead-o, you get dead some mighty poor hands along with the good ones. Sherman won out financially at the Lyric and he is the reason why Willie could not gather in the shekels also, for he is an ideal manager, with an intimate savvy of the business.

All patrons of good clean sport should not fail to see the championship lacrosse game between Strathcona and Calgary on Wednesday evening, July 31st at 8.30 on Victoria grounds. Strathcona is the banner lacrosse place and the Calgary boys know that if they defeat them on this day will put the locals in second place, and a chance of getting first honors on the second series of games. The boys have been out every night this week, working hard to give Strathcona the finest kind of a game and to give their patrons the worth of their money. The management has been a fine one and have done everything to get the best players out, and to give the players everything they require in the way of sticks, suits, shoes, etc., and at the same time are ever watchful to keep the game clean as lacrosse must be played. The boys never had proper encouragement in Calgary to play the game with outside teams. This year the proper men got behind it, and the work they have done speaks for itself. They have already spent about five hundred dollars for sticks, suits, traveling expenses, etc., and the season is only half over. The committee is composed of M. S. McCarthy, M.P., Ald. Moodie, Ald. Stuart, W. Telford, Dr. Hicks, Dr. Cashman, Ed. Dodd, G. Cullen, J. J. O'Gara and Wm. Stokes. All are taking a very keen interest and are desirous of placing the Canadian national game on a firm basis in Calgary and Alberta. The players consist of Capt. A. McDonnell, P. Powell, Ed. Powers, D. McLeod, T. Dunne, J. Ross, B. Ross, B. Harrison, J. Ready, F. Anderson, E. Curlins W. Laing, J. Sewell, H. Reynolds, J. Moir, D. Dodd, H. McQuaid, H. Bowes, P. Belhune, E. Dodd, P. Willett, C. Williams, all good experienced men and every man must practice hard if he expects a place on the team. The boys need every assistance, as they have to provide for another trip north and the committee wish to add to the equipment of the club. The game with Strathcona will be played before the bleachers on the ball diamond. The tickets are 25c, no extra charge for seats. Everyone should turn out, to the game, cheer for Calgary and help them to win the Alberta Cup, which goes with the championship.

In referring to the Calgary Fair of 1906 one must deal in superlatives. It is the best. He exhibits are the most creditable, its live stock is by far the most valuable, its attendance is the best ever held in western Canada, between the old boundary line of Winnipeg and the coast. It is fair all so accustomed to speak with enthusiasm about some things that a mere announcement of the superiority of the fair of this season does not tell the whole story. The very brief allusion will satisfy any person that superlatives are not exaggerations, but as in this case, they are weak and almost expressionless.

To find the dramatist, let us first regard the scene in which the fair this year is placed. There is a decided change in the arrangement of things, and for the first time the Calgary fair looks like a real exhibition. In years past there was a group of buildings in one part of the ground, a group of sheds in another, a bunch of tents in another, horse stables in another, and the bidding which was

Any person who has visited the Toronto exhibition and witnessed the delightful slope down to the lake, pictured in his mind how very beautiful Victoria Park will be when the banks are nicely boulevarded, and the grounds slope gently down to the river. That is what is coming, and the fact that it is not here does not prevent one from noticing the beautiful features of that portion of the park which is inhabited for the first time.

The Lauder-Mullin boxing contest was prohibited by the civic authorities on the day it was to have been pulled off. The fight was not stopped from any moral considerations. Not at all. Mullen came down from Banff overnight, and this meant that with the contest still on the tapis, Mullen's backers would have lost their bets. The action of the finance committee was in the nature of a coup d' etat, the result of which saved considerable money to some of the men who backed Mr. Mullin. It is a joke to say that the police committee just became aware of the approaching contest, on the day that Mullin came down from Banff, for Alderman Moodie, a prominent member of this committee, was the official stakeholder.

HAYWOOD TELLS HIS STORY

Had No Dealings with Orchard and Did Not Pay Him Money.

Boise, Idaho, July 11.—William D. Haywood took the oath today as a witness in his own defense, and in a lengthy narrative of his life and work as a leader of his fellow miners, which was interrupted by adjournment, denied guilt of the murder of Frank Steunenberg and the manifold crimes charged against him by Harry Orchard. Haywood was pale and trembled with nervousness when he left the table of his counsel for the witness stand and at once began to respond to Clarence Darrow's questions.

His voice was low and somewhat uncertain, but within ten minutes he had regained his composure and for the rest of the afternoon he was master of himself. When he told of his boyhood, which began with toil at the age of nine, and gave the history of his family, his invalid wife, who sat just to the left of the witness stand, began sobbing softly. Her mother and her nurse soon comforted her, however, and during the rest of the afternoon she and the rest of the Haywood kinfolk were quiet but deeply concerned auditors. Haywood's direct testimony today was characteristic chiefly because of positive denials of allegations made against him by the prosecution.

He denied that he met Orchard until some time after the Vindicator mine explosion, denied that he sent Orchard back to Cripple Creek to blow up the independence station; denied participation in the murder of Detective Gregory, and denied suggesting or discussing the Steunenberg murder. He swore that he never gave Orchard any money at any time or any place, for any purpose. He declared that he never made a threat against Steunenberg, whom he regarded only as a participant by capitalistic influence. He detailed a number of occasions when he met Orchard in Denver in the ordinary course of his relations with the federation, and George A. Pettibone, and said he saw Orchard for the last time in August, 1905, when Orchard told him he was going to Alaska. Haywood said he then charged Orchard for deserting his wife at Cripple Creek.

The direct examination has not reached the connection of Jack Simpkins with the federation and the action of the federation after Steunenberg was murdered when court adjourned.

Cross Examination of Moyer.

The state completed the cross examination of Charles H. Moyer at noon, and with dealing with his testimony directed the strongest attack against the circumstances under which the federation, at Simpkins' suggestion, came to the relief of Orchard when he was arrested for the killing of Steunenberg. Senator Borah, who conducted the examination, emphasized the relations of Simpkins with the federation and the fact that the federation without inquiry as to the guilt or innocence of Orchard, furnished $1,500 from its treasury for his defence. He also developed the fact that the federation is providing for the defence of Steve Adams, who is charged with killing two claim jumpers at the instigation of Simpkins.

Moyer denied any knowledge of the hint that Haywood sent to Jack Simpkins a few days before Steunenberg was assassinated, which is traced to Orchard by an anonymous note of Caldwell jail and a coincidence of dates.

Haywood became a member of the executive board of the Western Federation of Miners in 1900, holding that position until June, 1901, when he was elected secretary-treasurer, an office which he still nominally fills. His salary is $150 a month.

Asked if the federation employed attorneys, Haywood declared that at times as high as twenty-two attorneys were on the payroll. Its growth had been steady ever since thatsime, with the exception of the Cripple Creek year, when there was a temporary loss of some 5,00 members. The federation, according to Haywood, has always taken an active interest in politics, one of its objects being to elect its friends and defeat its enemies. It has also taken a deep interest in labor measures affecting all classes of workingmen. An eight-hour day law, as applied to miners, has been secured in nearly every state where the federation is organized. In some cases it became necessary to amend state constitutions before the eight-hour statute could be effective.

Before Judge Gray 10—In the course of the direct examination of Moyer in the Haywood trial this afternoon, the defense attempted to bring in testimony and argue their right to show that Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone were illegally brought from Colorado to Idaho. Judge Wood announced that he would not allow the defense to go into the legality of the depositions.

Objections by the state to any questions bearing on this matter were sustained.

The direct examination of Moyer was concluded at 1:59 p.m. Cross examination will be begun tomorrow morning.

When Moyer went to the stand he was questioned by Mr. Darrow as to details of his early life. He said he had been a miner since 1885. He joined the Western Federation of Miners in 1897, was first elected president in 1902 and had been re-elected annually since that time. He first met Haywood at the 1900 convention in Denver Haywood was chosen secretary treasurer the following year.

Moyer said that as president bond was not required of him, but that Haywood as secretary treasurer was under bond of $20,000.

The witness declared that his duties as president of the organization required his absence from headquarters a greater part of the time.

The territory covered by the Western Federation extended from Michigan to the Pacific coast, and from Alaska to Mexico. There were 2,200 members of the Federation when Moyer was elected in 1902. When he was arrested more than a year ago, there were 30,000 members and according to this year's report there are more than 61,000 members.

"Mr. Moyer, during your time as president what has been the outcome of the organization as to defining members to the union who have been charged with crime growing out of their connection with the Union or where the Federation has been involved?" asked Mr. Darrow.

"It has been the rule of the organization to protect its members for the interests of the organization where attacks have been made against them."

Moyer spoke with animation and paused, when he seemed to weigh every word of his answers.

"Has the organization had to defend its members quite often?"

"Yes."

"And have there been many convictions?"

"Very few considering the number who have had charges preferred against them."

Mr. Darrow next took witness to the Cripple Creek district of Colorado and the beginning of the labor strife there, which strike started at Colorado in 1903.

The state militia was called out almost as soon as the strike was started, and despite that fact, the witness declared there was no disorder. Many citizens protested against the presence of the soldiery. During the same year the strike extended to Cripple Creek, the men there going out in support of the Colorado city mill men. Practically all the ore mined in the Cripple Creek district at Colorado Junction directly for treatment in the mills there. The mine owners had been first requested to send their ore to Colorado City.

The Portland, the largest in the district sided with the union milling its own ore.

The strike spread to Telluride in September 1903, the millmen there going out for an eight hour day. An eight hour day law was passed in 1899 but had been declared unconstitutional. Soon after the strike was called at Cripple Creek, Moyer said, he and Haywood met to address the miners at a picnic in Cripple Creek.

"I addressed the men as to my opinion as to the strike should be conducted and gave the details as to the cause of the strike and urged the men to be careful about any acts of violence or any acts which might be charged against them and used against them in any way against the Federation" said Mr. Moyer.

The troops went into the Cripple Creek district April 4th, 1903.

"What was the condition as to peace and quiet at the time?" asked Mr. Darrow.

The state objected to this as a conclusion of the witness, and after discussion of the question was finally allowed and Moyer declared that there was perfect peace about their business and there was no disorder.

Boise, Idaho, July 11.—W. D. Haywood was called to the stand to testify in his own defense shortly after the court opened this afternoon.

Mr. Darrow first inquired as to where the early history of the organization between conventions existed.

Moyer said it existed in the executive board, the president and secretary-treasurer. He has been an active or ex-officio member of the executive board since 1901. He said he was present at Lead, S. D., during the Custer Cañon troubles of 1893, but he was not a member of the executive board at that time. He also testified to the Coeur d'Alene troubles of 1899, but he was not a member of the executive board at that time. He also learned of Gov. Steunenberg's participation in the strike.

The Defense of Federation Members.

Jack Simpkins was one of the men Moyer met at the convention. Senator Borah questioned the witness closely as to the extent of the rule of the federation to defend any of its members accused of crime. Moyer declared that no man was defended unless the executive board decided his arrest had some connection with the Western Federation of Miners.

"If a member of the federation should kill a man on the streets of Boise you would not defend him unless you felt the federation was in some way involved in the affair?" suggested Borah.

"That is my understanding. We would defend anyone whose act grew out of a strike, or whose arrest we felt was due to his connection with the Western Federation of Miners."

"You don't hold it out as an inducement to members that the federation will defend them for any crime committed, do you?"

"No, sir."

A Good Friend of the Organization.

Senator Borah next inquired as to Pettibone's relations to the Western Federation of Miners. Pettibone was not an active member, but when his business permitted, would attend the conventions and would come to headquarters. He was a good friend of the organization and ready to assist in any way he could. He has often bought furniture and other supplies for the organization and its members.

EXPORTATION BY RANCHERS

The Lack of Competition Will Lead Them to Take Drastic Action.

(Special to The Albertan.)

Erskine, July 11.—The beef commission sat today at Erskine in the heart of a fine ranching country.

The chief witnesses were ex-President Root, of the Central Alberta Stock Growers' Association; and R. L. Shaw, one of the principal buyers for Gordon Ironsides & Co.

Mr. Nolan was questioned the witnesses regarding competition, car supply and transportation, and upon the advisability of the direct exportation by the ranchers and the Stock Growers' Association.

Mr. Root stated that there was no competition, and that the Central Alberta Stock Growers' Association was contemplating shipment to Europe. They had been in communication with the clerks of several English cities, who referred them to reliable commission houses. Export cattle sent to Liverpool had offered to handle their cattle, too. As a remedy for these evils he thought it was in sight with the establishment of packing and canning houses in Calgary and Edmonton.

President Whiteside, of the Stock Growers' Association, thought the government should go into the retail butcher trade and utilize all the butcher cattle now entered in the province.

R. L. Shaw stated that Gordon & Ironsides paid the freight on all the cattle they shipped, and charged it to their account. He did not know whether Gordon & Ironsides had a rakeoff or not.

The commission will sit here again tomorrow.

Confession of Dr. Boston, Temporarily Mayor of San Francisco.

San Francisco, July 11.—Dr. Charles Boston, temporarily mayor of San Francisco, while on the witness stand today in the Glass trial, testified of his alleged bribery by Theodore V. Halsey, the resident agent of the Pacific States Telephone company.

Boston said Halsey paid him $5,000 (mist in $100 bills) for saving voted and used his influence as a supervisor against a free franchise being granted the Home Telephone company.

The only important question asked of Boston in cross examination before he was excused brought out that the latter, according to their confession to the grand jury, they had been bribed in order to defeat the Home Telephone company, was held in the office of Mayor Schmitz, on the Sunday preceding February 24, 1906.
